U.S. Persuades Israel to Delay Pullout From Chuf Mountains

Washington Post Service WASHINGTON - The United States has persuaded Israel to delay for a few days its troop withdrawal from the Chuf mountains of Lebanon, but administration officials said that no decisions had been a made about moving units of the multinational force into that conflict zone after the Israelis leave.

■ Jumblat Arrives in Paris

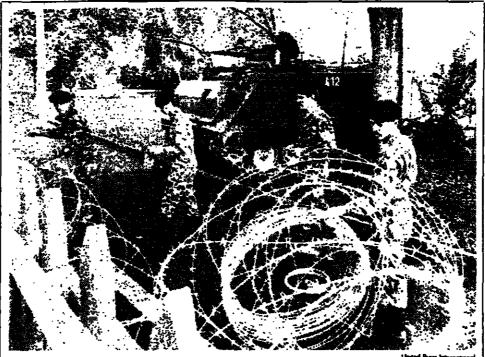

The Lebanese Druze leader, Walid Jumblat, arrived Friday in Paris for a humiedly arranged meeting with Mr. McFarlane, The Associated Press reported.

Meanwhile, the state radio in Beirnt reported that Mr. Gemayel's national security adviser, Wadi Haddad, also left for Paris on Friday after conferring with Mr. McFarlane's assistant, Richard Leaders of the National Salvation Front are willing to meet with the president of the republic," it said, "to discuss a national reconciliation either at the summer seat of Lebanon's Maronite patriarch at Diman in Besherri or at the Arab League headquarters in Tunis."

The statement was issued in the orthern Lebanese city of Tripoli by Lebanon's former president, Su-leman Franjieh, a Maronite, and former Prime Minister Rashid Karami, a Sunni Moslem.

Eight Jaguar ground-attack planes and four Mirage fighters are also on alert in France to fly to the neighboring Central African Republic in case the situation in Chad eteriorates, they added. France has already sent up to 2,500 paratroops and 10 combat planes to its former colony, where Libyan-backed rebels are threatening President Hissène Habre's government. The Defense Ministry said it would not confirm or deny the arms shipments. Political sources said the strengthening of the French forces would emphasize President François Mitterrand's warning to Libya on Thursday that France could take the offensive in Chad if its troops were attacked.

Mr. Habré told Charles Hernu, the French defense minister, in Ndjamena on Friday that the situation in Chad was grave. His government said earlier that Libyan tanks had fanned out south from the rebel-held town of Fava-Largeau toward the defense lines established by the French. Mr. Hernu, who later flew to the eastern city of Abeche to inspect French units, had been sent by Mr. Mitterrand to persuade Mr. Habre not to launch a counterattack to try to recapture the north, diplomats

Andropov Offers To Scrap Some SS-20s if West Alters Position

By Dusko Doder

MOSCOW - President Yuri V. Andropov of the Soviet Union offered Friday to scrap a "considerable number" of his country's SS-20 missiles as part of an eventual agreement on limiting medium-range nuclear weapons in Europe.

Speaking to a correspondent for the Communist Party newspaper Pravda, Mr. Andropov renewed his demand that the United States abandon its planned deployment of 572 Pershing-2 and cruise mis-siles in five West European nations. He also renewed Moscow's offer to cut its medium-range missile force to the same level as that of Britain and France combined.

"We are ready to make another major step.
"Should a mutually acceptable agreement be achieved, including renunciation by the United States of the deployment of new missiles, the Soviet Union, in reducing its medium-range missiles in the European part of the country to the level equal to the numbers of missiles of Britain and France, would liqui-date all the missiles to be reduced. "In this event a considerable number of the most modern missiles, known in the West as SS-20s, would be liquidated as well." The offer was interpreted by senior Western diplomats as a significant concession by the Kremlin likely to have a positive impact on Western Europe as well as on China and Japan.

It also appeared to meet President Ronald Reagan's demand that a mere removal of Soviet SS-20 missiles behind the Ural mountains would not meet his standards for an acceptable agreement on curb-ing medium-range arms in Europe. The United States has argued that the mobile missiles could easily be moved back within range of Western Europe.

According to Western estimates, Moscow has 351 triple-warhead SS-20 missiles deployed as part of its medium-range forces. About 100 are situated in the Asian part of the country, presumably targeted Mr. Andropov's proposal to dis-mantle "all the missiles to be reduced" was the first such specific Kremlin statement since the Soviet Union and the United States began talks at Geneva in 1981. The Russians had indicated that some medium-range nuclear means could be dismantled while others would be moved into Siberia out of range of western Europe. Japan and China have strongly objected to the removal of these weapons to the Asian part of the Soviet Union on the ground that they would constitute an additional threat to their security. Mr. Andropov said his offer was a gesture of goodwill all round. He said it rendered "totally groundless" assertions that Moscow intended to retain "the SS-20 missiles which are to be reduced." He said Japan and China should have no concerns that the missiles would be relocated closer to their territories.

Mr. Andropov said his offer to Washington "makes it clear to any unprejudiced person that the Soviet Union has done and is doing everything in its power to find solutions" at Geneva and that it wanted to achieve an agreement with the United States in order to "prevent a new and extremely dangerous round in the nuclear arms race in Europe."

■ Some Progress Is Seen

U.S. officials said that the new Soviet statement showed some progress but left key issues unresolved. Based on early press reports, they said, Mr. Andropov appeared to have met one Western condition by promising to scrap or "liqui-date" the SS-20 missiles that would be removed from Europe if an agreement were reached with the U.S. officials said Mr. Andropov gave no sign of retreating from his demand that the United States cancel plans to deploy new missiles in Europe while leaving some Soviet SS-20s. Washington and its allies have repeatedly called this unacceptable.

"Basically the demands on the West are unchanged — cancel the deployment," an official said. President Reagan has offered to cancel them if Moscow scraps all its SS-20s in Asia and Europe. He has also offered, as an interim arrangement, to deploy fewer than the planned 572 missiles if Moscow reduces its force to an equal num-

New York Times Service MILWAUKEE — Late one night in June, a young man working at an inexpensive home computer tried to make contact with a large commercial computer. Using a trial-and-error technique that figures in several of the recent incidents that have drawn attention to computer vulnerability, he tried various codes for gaining entry to New York City computers tied

The intrusions have called attention to the ease with which sophisticated computers can be entered. They have also raised questions about the effectiveness of security measures and about the legal issues involved in entering computers without authorization.

The young men say they did not "target" any of the computers, but like prairie dogs popping into their holes, entered computers at random, wherever they

State Department Ex-Aides Say Messages to Filipino Agents Were Intercepted

Insurgents Said to Step Up Fight With Sandinists

New York Times Service MANAGUA - Rebels fighting the Nicaraguan government have stepped up their activity in the last week, mounting at least eight at-tacks over a wide area of northern Nicaragua and inflicting scores of casualties, according to government officials.

Nicaraguan officials and diplomats said they believe that as many as 2,000 insurgents have entered Nicaragua from bases in Honduras this month. The Defense Ministry issued a statement Thursday asserting that Nicaragua was facing "a new escalation of aggression.

Defense Minister Humberto Ortega Saavedra said last weekend that the military situation had be-come "difficult."

What makes blacks run are essentially economic issues. Social and economic gains won by black Americans in the 1960s have been effectively halted in recent years by inflation and a sluggish economy. The Census Bureau reports that the income gap between blacks and whites is as wide today as it was in

Black unemployment is now 18 percent, nearly double the national figure. Worse, in many blacks' analysis, their problems are becoming permanent. The U.S. census showed that the number of black households headed by a woman, with no man, has risen from 28 percent in 1970 to 40.6 percent last year. Single-parent households, led by women, are seen by many sociologists as liable to leave the children less well equipped for school and work and more often destined for social

To remedy this, Mr. Jackson talks of forming what he calls a "rainbow coalition," including blacks, Hispanics, feminists and members of anti-war movements. Soviet Antisatellite Test Is Reported

FRANKFURT (AP) - A West German newspaper said Friday than the Soviet Union tested an antisatellite weapon over Bavaria last summer. The Frankfurter Allgemeine, a respected conservative daily, said the test was carried out in June 1982 during major maneuvers involving Soviet missile units. "During this exercise," the report said, "a killer satellite was deployed against a target satellite sent into orbit beforehard The killer satellite was triggered over lower Bavaria."

The newspaper said "previously secret information" about the Societ test was disclosed Thursday to demonstrate Western concern about Moscow's latest proposals for a ban on space weapons. The report from Bonn was attributed to West German sources who were not further identified. The Soviet president, Yuri V. Andropov, told U.S. senators visiting Moscow on Aug. 18 that Moscow planned a new initiative on banning weapons from space.

Nigeria Prepares to Vote for Deputies

LAGOS (AP) - For the fourth time in four weeks, Nigerians will vote Saturday to elect members of the House of Representatives, the lower house of the National Assembly.

The country's pre-eminent National Party hopes to consolidate sweeping gains achieved in previous rounds, while opposition parties have appealed for a strong voter turnout to reverse their losses. In the previous ballots, President Shehu Shagari was re-elected by a four-million-vote margin out of 25.5 million votes cast; the National Party won 13 of 32 state governorships and 55 of the 85 contested federal Senate seats. The party's victories have prompted comment that Nigeria, one of Africa's few multi-party democracies, is drifting toward a one-party state. The price of hospital care, rate of inflation, has become the fastest rising cost of doing business in the United States. Corporations are paying $77 billion this year in health insurance premiums, more than those companies will pay out in dividends. Chrysler Corp. estimates that its health-care costs add $600 to the price of each car the company sells.

So corporations — and the U.S. government, which is worried about the drag on business and about its own bills — are moving to make health delivery a more competitive business.

Medicare and other government insurance programs and corporations with health insurance programs are incurring huge bills because of several developments. Expensive new kinds of care became available with medical breakthroughs in the 1970s, but there is also a trend for Americans to go to the hospital more often (an increasing proportion of Americans are born in the hospital and die there) and stay longer.

To reduce patients' hospital time, major companies are offering incentives to hospitals and to their own employees to find out-patient or other forms of treatment designed to cut hospital costs. In its own bid to cut hospital charges for Medi-care and Medicaid patients, new legislation, going into ef-fect on Oct. I, will remodel the system of reimbursing hospitals. Payments used to be on a cost-plus basis, a fixed fee or percentage added to the actual cost. Now they will be set in advance for each case, so hospitals will be under financial pressure to limit services and hospital stay to the care prescribed.

A result of this new string cy, experts predict, will include the bankruptcy over the coming decade of at least 1,000 of the 5,200 nonprofit hospitals in the United States.

All 14 Democratic senators running next year are considered likely to retain their seats. Republican worries about their fragility in the Senate will greatly increase the pressure on Mark O. Hatfield of Oregon to run again. Mr. Hatfield, who has held public office continuously since 1950, has made no secret of his desire to retire next year, but his departure would mean the Republicans could no longer count on Oregon as a safe seat.

they have found conflicts of interest and cronyism in the Defense Science Board that advises the armed forces on future weapons programs. The auditors said that the board was violating federal conflict-of-interest law by allowing defense industry executives who serve on it to vote on decisions that might benefit them.

The Pentagon's research chief, Richard D. De-

Lauer, rejected the most serious criticisms and suggested that the inspector general's office would damage its "credibility" and "usefulness" if similar reports became public in the future.

Members of Congress who read the report have threatened to withhold the board's funding this fall if problems are not corrected.

The report said membership on the prestigious board appeared to be based on "personal knowledge" forces appointed by the Defense Science Board has among Pentagon and industry officials rather than on met legal requirements for disclosing meetings, keeping minutes and filing personal disclosure forms.

Mandated conflict-of-interest reviews were "superficial" and "perfunctory," the report said, and often took place after a board member had begun his term. Among those most frequently represented were the University of California, TRW Inc., Hughes Aircraft, Bell Laboratories and the Raytheon Corp.

The executives and officials on the board cited each other as references to get their positions and frequently had held each other's jobs in the past.

"It appeared that the membership of the DSB and the task forces was based on personal knowledge rather than based on a group of technical experts drawn from a universe of knowledgeable individuals," the report said.

In an interview this week, Mr. DeLaner, who is undersecretary for defense research and engineering, defended the Defense Science Board. Mr. DeLauer sat on the board when he was a civilian working for TRW Inc., a major defense contractor.

"We might have been sloppy about filling out the forms right, which we've fixed, but there's never really been a problem with conflict of interest," Mr. De-Lauer said. "You've got to pick the people with the

Grain Pact Gives Soviet Assurances U.S. Leaders Won't Repeat Embargo

By Clyde H. Farnsworth New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - The Reagan administration has gone out of its way to persuade the Soviet Union that there will be no recurrence of a grain embargo under the new five-year agreement that the two countries signed in Moscow.

The curtailment on sales that President Jimmy Carter imposed in 1980 was criticized by the administration Thursday, and that drew a sharp retort from a former official of the Carter administration.

The accord, signed Thursday, commits the United States to sell at least 9 million tons to the Soviet Union annually. It says that the U.S. government "shall not exercise any discretionary authority available to it under United States law" to limit the shipments.

The administration thus pledged, in effect, that neither it nor a future administration may invoke existing foreign policy or far-reaching national security legislation to block exports.

An Agriculture Department official, who asked not to be identified, said: "It would have to be a very serious thing, a national emergency, a severing of diplomatic relations, almost a state of war for the United States to curtail supplies." In Moscow Thursday, Agriculture Secretary John R. Block called the partial embargo placed by Mr. Carter on Jan. 4, 1980, in the aftermath of the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, "distasteful."

"At the time of the embargo we furnished 70 percent of the grain import needs of the Russians," Mr. Lane said. "After the embargo, the percentage dropped to about 20 or 25 percent, and we are now trying to regain that market."

The supply guarantees come against a background of so-called sanctity-of-contract legislation that the president signed in January. Under that law, if there were another embargo, shippers would have 270 days after its declaration to deliver what they had sold before the cutoff.

In 1980, there was no such legislation, and contracts were simply

Mr. Reagan tried to repair some of the political damage caused by alle-gations by a former Justice Department official, Barbara Honegger, that Mr. Reagan had reneged on a commitment to purge federal laws and regulations of provisions that discriminate against women.

That program has been described by the administration as its alternative to the proposed Equal Rights Amendment. Miss Honegcalled it a sham. She resigned Monday.

There are laws already on the books to safeguard the rights of women," Mr. Reagan said, speaking to a Republican women's leadership forum. "Those laws must be enforced. Some must be strength-

Gypsies Trek to French Village To Respond to the Call to Jesus

GRAMAT, France - The beautiful young woman, dressed all in white, with a white ribbon that cut through her black hair like a quarter-moon on a night sky, walked onto center stage. She stepped into a two-foot-tall, plastic wading

She looked nervous, sitting in the water. A man thrust a microphone before her and asked if she was ready to "follow Jesus." She said yes, but it was barely audible even with the mike.

Then she was propelled backward, under the water. She leaped up gasping, drenched, as two wom-en rushed forward to wrap her in a sheet. The audience clapped, the men on stage smiled. The Gypsy band broke into another round of

What distinguished the four-day evangelical meeting that gathered on a hilly pasture outside this small village in southern France was that almost all of the 12,000 to 15,000 celebrants were gypsies.

The attendance at the regional convention of the World Gypsy Evangelical Movement, founded 30 years ago by Mr. Le Cossec at Brest, was proof enough that Protestant fundamentalism is spreading rapidly among European gypsies, especially in France.

New York Times Service WASHINGTON - The Congressional Budget Office has reported that 40 percent of the cut-backs in U.S. benefit programs over the past two years affected households with annual incomes of less than $10,000.

In a comprehensive report Thursday, the budget office said that U.S. outlays for almost all human service programs had been reduced below the amounts that would have been spent in 1982-85 under the laws existing when President Ronald Reagan took office.

households with incomes below $10,000," the Congressional Budget Office concluded. "In 1984, for example, such households will lose an average of $430 in benefits relative to what they would have received under prior law, as com-pared to an average loss over all moome categories of about $250." The 80-page nonpartisan study, done at the request of Representa tive Thomas P. O'Neili Jr., Democrat of Massachusetts, who is the speaker of the House, showed the effects of completed legislative ac-tion, not proposals. It did not at-tempt to measure the effects of income tax reductions and payroll tax increases adopted in the last

The study described a change in the makeup of the U.S. budget. Military spending is scheduled to rise from 25.7 percent of the budget in fiscal 1982 to nearly 30 percent in 1985, it said. The share devoted to retirement and disability programs would decline slightly, to 24.3 percent from 24.9 percent, although the number of retirees receiving Social Security benefits is expected to rise substantially.

Commenting on the report, Larry M. Speakes, the White House spokesman, said it did not take into account "the obvious the economy resulting from Mr.
Reagan's policies. The report said
Chinese to Go to Soviet Fair that "if the program changes, taken together, should significantly raise the rate of economic growth and reduce unemployment, they would provide higher incomes that would cow book fair for the first time, the offset reductions in benefits."

But Mr. O'Neill said the study supported his contention that Mr. Reagan's policies were unfair to the poor. "This report cuts through the smokescreen of Reagan public relations to the harsh truth of the Reagan record," Mr. O'Neill said. That truth will have major consequences in 1984."

Only 23 percent of all households have annual incomes less than $10,000, but they absorb 40 percent of all the reductions in U.S. ending for individual benefits in the four years from 1982 through 1985, the study said.

Forty-eight percent of house-holds have incomes less that $20,000 a year, the report said. These households absorb 70 percent of the cutbacks in spending for benefits, it said.

In explaining this pattern, the budget office observed that famlies in the lowest income brackets were likely to receive more in direct U.S. benefits than other families. But it also said the cuts were deeper in programs where benefits were contingent upon a showing of fi-nancial need. These programs, known as means-tested programs. primarily benefit low-income households. They were cut by about 8 percent overall. By contrast, there was a reduction of about 4 percent in benefit programs without such a "means test."

The budget office found only two programs in which legislative action increased outlays. They were in special supplementary feeding for women, and Supplemental Security income, or cash assisance for the aged, disabled and blind. In each program, outlays for 1982-85 are expected to be 4 percent higher than they would otherwise have

A Rare Show of Familiar Masters From Soviet Museums

By Michael Brenson New York Times Service

in Ano

LUGANO, Switzerland — One of the most spectular exhibitions in Europe this summer is not in Paris or London or Berlin but in a villa on the eastern tip of Luzano. In exchange for a loan of 40 paintings from his celebrated Old Master collection, Baron Hans Heinrich Thyssen-Bornemisza has borrowed 40 late 19th- and early 20th-century French paintings of the highest quality from the Hermitage Museum in, Leningrad and the Pushkin Museum in Moscow.

The paintings have been rarely seen in the West since they were acquired by the two great Russian collectors, Ivan Morozov and Sergei Shchukin, in the years prior to World War I. This Impressionism to Cubism greatest-hits show, installed in the baron's Villa Favorita, the building that houses his Old Master museum, continues through Oct. 15. The Soviet authorities' selection of the baron's top 40 will be on display at the Pushkin and the Hermitage in

The initial response to "Masterpieces of Impressionism and Post-Impressionism From Soviet Museums" is likely to be a sense of disbelief. Seeing so many major but still largely unseen and therefore unassimilated paintings by Monet, Renoir, Van Gogh (three by each), Gauguin (nine, one self-portrait and eight paintings of the South Seas), Cezanne (eight), Matisse (six) and Picasso (eight, including five diverse Cubist works), in a setting that is as accessible as the exhibition's scale, may send the visitor scurrying through the rooms, as a child scurries through his entire lode of presents, needing to know the extent of his riches before concentrating on one negget in particu-

According to villa officials, the exhibition was initiated by Vladimir S. Semyonov, formerly head of the Soviet delegation to the Strategtic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) and currently Soviet ambassador to West Germany, who wanted for a long time to bring to the Soviet Union a selection of the baron's Old Master collection. A selection of works from Thyssen's 20th-century holdings will go on display at the Metropolitan in New York on Lugano show himself. With the exception of the van Goghs, in every instance the selection suggests the full strength of the particular artist. Installing a greatest-hits show consisting of a handful of works by a limited number of artists is always a problem. The approach in this case is not historical. Moving from Monet, van Gogh and Renoir to Picasso, then from Gangnin to Matisse to Cezanne, there is really no way to trace the development from artist to artist, movement to movement. The most striking effect of the sequence is that Picasso and Cezanne become the standard by which the work of the other artists is mea-

A show that brings together so many eminent but rarely experienced works has a chance of changing the way the authors of those works are seen. Renoir, for example, may still be tainted by the modernist assumption that major artistic ambition and a painterly preoccupation with the good life are mutually exclusive. In this show, there are two portraits by Renoir, both of celebrated women, both superb. In the 1876 "Woman in Black" and the 1878 Portrait of the Actress Jeanne Samary," Impressionist brush and color, with their evocation of transience and movement, are combined with a frontal, symmetrical structure that feels as inflexible as a two-ton block of stone. Renoit works against the immobility in such a way that the figures and the paintings seem newborn, having just this second come to life. The earning and the flower of the hair of the "Woman in Black" are radiant pieces of painting that would draw approval from the best of Renoir's Venetian and Dutch ancestors.

The idea of emerging life is central to the theme of Picasso's show-stopping 1908 "Three Women." This more than six-foot tall painting of three monumental, sculptural figures — a kneeling woman at the right, what seems to be a man starting to rise on the left, and a somewhat androgynous figure standing between them (Leo Steinberg has suggested that "Two or Three Women" would be a more accurate title) - in front of a rock landscape, seems in many ways diametrically opposed to the major Picasso of the previous year, the "Demoiselles d'Avignon." Picasso's 1908 "Dryad" is a painting of a large, dual female figure striding through a forest: the "Demoiselles d'Avignon" suggests the dryad's defiant, closed-fisted left hand; the "Three Women" suggests her right hand, curved and open in a gesture of accessibility and welcome. It is hard to see the two paintings apart.

Steinberg sees the "Three Women," on one level, as a way of resisting Cezanne, who died in 1906 and was given a memorial exhibition in Paris in 1907. Indeed, in its shallow space and muted tones, the Picasso could hardly be further from a painting like Cezanne's 1905-6 "Mont Sainte-Victoire Seen From Les Lauves." In the background of the Cezanne is the familiar white mountain, in the foreground a rumbling mass of brown, green, blue and other paint where it seems as if all the trees and fields of Provence have been fed into the canvas. Unlike Monet's 1867 "Woman in the Garden" - in its shower of light the quintessential Impressionist painting in the show —
"Mont Sainte-Victoire" is not a painting concerned with the flash of a moment. Colors "arise out of the roots of the world," Cézanne wanted his paintings to devour earth, water and sky. Even for Cézanne, the materiality of this small painting is extraordinary. If it were suddenly jarred loose from the wall, one has the sense it would go through the floor. Almost all the Cezannes in the show, including the 1873-75 still life and self-portrait and the 1895-1900 "The Smoker," seem like elements unto themse The one artist in the show who is outclassed is Gauguin se of his liberties with space, his inventive use of color and his subsequent importance for modernist devel-opments such as Fauvism and German Expressionism, guin's problems as a painter have some overlooked. Even with the startling play of primary colors and compositional rhythms of Tahitian paintings in the show like the 1892 "Landscape With Peacocks" and 1896 "Tabitians in a Room," many of his paintings remain, in some sense, at war with themselve The conflicts in Gauguin's paintings between inhibition and instinct, self-consciousness and spontancity, the so-phisticated and the primitive, human life and nature, ambition and escape, were certainly not his conflicts alone. With the Neo-Expressionism and neo-primitivism of contemporary painting, it is clear the degree to which they are ours. Ganguin defined the problem. All the other artists in this invaluable show suggest answers.

Frida Kahlo: Belated Success

By Soll Sussman The Associated Pres

MEXICO CITY — An exhibition featuring the work of the Mexican painter Frida Kahlo is receiving the publicity and enthusiasm usually reserved here for such artists as Pablo Picasso or Henry Moore.

That may be related to the growing international interest in the Kahlo's work, especially among feminists and by Mexican-American activists in the United States.

"What's most important about this exhibit is that there are paintings by Frida from foreign collections that haven't been shown in Mexico for many years," says Paulina Campdera of the National Art

The show also features photographs by Tina Modotti, who came to Mexico in the 1920s as the companion of the pioneering photogra-pher Edward Weston, It was put together by London's Whitechapel Art Gallery and was shown in West Germany and New York before opening at the National Museum here June 14.

Kahlo died in 1954 at the age of 47. She is best known as the wife of the Mexican painter and muralist Diego Rivera, but she has gained a reputation and a following in her

One of them, "Art Itinerary," consists of three sections. The first, "The Materials of Art," is deployed against the noble background of Volterra, the ancient Etruscan citadel overlooking the fields of the Maremma spreading to the sea, de-scribed as rather melancholy by D.H. Lawrence in his "Etruscan Places," but recently grown into a lively center for discerning tourists. The second and third sections, "The Persistence of Painting" and "Drawings," are housed in a villa about 35 miles to the south, in the resort of Castiglioncello, once the site of one of Volterra's seaports.

The divergent styles — the mix-ture of by now traditional abstraction with new expressionism; would-be primitives with straight figuratives; recognized artists next to the unknown; the works from Italy, France, England and thbe United States — might at first sight appear like a wild grab bag, but at second the whole reveals itself as the intelligent and tolerant selection of a critic who has been everywhere and been directly in touch with developments and who has a catholic taste.

fellow," says one entry in the journal kept by the secretary to Sir Francis Walsingham, responsible for intelligence in the government of Queen Elizabeth L The duties of the "base fellow" were to inform upon others, which is what Klaus Barbie was hired to do in 1947 by the Counter Intelligence Corps of the United States army. Barbie claimed to have contacts and knowledge of Communist operations and influence in postwar Germany and France, so he was hired, harbored and eventually removed from the reach of French justice by the CIC.

Did the army know it had hired a base fellow? It certainly knew he had been a Gestapo officer, which is how he had acquired the qualifications that recommended him to the CIC; and he was on a list of war criminals. But when the State Department and the U.S. High Commissioner's Office in Germany told the army that he was sought by the French, the army chose to save him.

Why? Organizational loyalities? Distrust and dislike of the French, together with fear that in French hands he would reveal U.S. intelligence operations not only in Germany but in France? Organizational embarrassment at having used Barbie in the first place? All seem to have been motives.

But it was an odd morality that applied, saving Barbie in 1951 after collaborating with him since 1947, when at the same time

"I today went out and hired me a base allied courts were prosecuting thousands of Germans as war criminals. The United States itself, at its courts in Nuremberg and Dachau from 1945 to 1949 (when Germany assumed responsibility for war crimes prosecutions), sentenced more than 450 Germans to death for war crimes. (Most of these sentences were subsequently reduced).

The former senior American intelligence officer who writes under the pseudonym 'Christopher Felix" has described - in his 1963 book "A Short Course in the Secret War" - the American approach to such matters as often that "of moral people who, when faced with an amoral problem, cannot understand the category and therefore behave immorally." That conduct is obviously unedifying. It is also stupid and dangerous; it must be expected eventually to risk rebounding against the country in whose name it is done. The American apology to France for the army's conduct in the Barbie matter is an honorable act with few precedents in international relations. What is deplorable is that it should have been necessary.

What is indispensable is to ensure that the intelligence and political operations being conducted by the American government today have nothing in them that will in future require such an apology. The revelation that the army considered rehiring Barbie in the 1960s makes this a more urgent issue.

Stalemate in Poland

This has been a demoralizing week for opponents of the Jaruzelski dictatorship in Poland. They attempted a slowdown at the Lenin Shipyard, Solidarity's birthplace, and it fizzled; one of underground Solidarity's five chiefs, Wladyslaw Hardek, accepted a government amnesty and appeared on television urg-ing others to follow his example; and Western bankers, increasingly nervous about Poland's debt, are urging their governments to ease Warsaw's financial isolation. But none of this can give the regime much encouragement. Its political and economic goals remain as incompatible as they have been since martial law was declared almost two years ago.

Last fall, when a series of strikes and demonstrations [ell short of expectations, many of us in the West prematurely declared the resistance defeated. Then the pope's visit showed that caution should not be mistaken for capitulation. Repression has had its effect, but in the right circumstances, the true sentiments of Poland become clear.

This pattern of sputter and flash was evident even during Solidarity's heyday in 1980 and 1981. The contrast with the present is that then the Warsaw authorities refrained from any course based only on force and fear. They understood that Poland's complex economy cannot be run effectively without some cooperation from the work force.

What was true then is no less true today, even if the Kremlin will no longer let its Polish clients recognize its truth. They have proved they can tighten political control, as Moscow demanded. The economic revival sought by Poland's creditors remains hypothetical. But combining the two is still not a possibility at all. So the demoralizing stalemate continues.

Doing Business With Moscow

The signing in Moscow of a new five-year grain agreement between the United States and the U.S.S.R. may mark a fresh approach by Washington to the thorny question of eco-nomic sanctions, but it certainly does not end the heated debate on how best to coordinate policy on East-West trade. There is resentment in Europe that whereas European industry suffered from U.S. sanctions on the Siberian gas pipeline, in the grain deal U.S. domestic politics weighed more heavily than the inter-ests of the alliance. Strengthening and expand-ing the competence of the Coordinating Committee charged with restricting exports of strategic materials and equipment to Communist countries would be a constructive step in avoiding such conflicts of interest in future.

- The Times (London).

President Reagan, overriding strong objections from Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger, has lifted controls on the sale of pipeline-laying tractors to the Soviet Union. The decision, coming soon after the negotiation of a new long-term grain agreement, constitutes welcome evidence that the administration is becoming more pragmatic in its management of U.S.-Soviet trade relations.

A strong element of domestic politics was involved in both decisions. Midwestern grain farmers were very much on the president's mind in working out a grain deal, and he was obviously aware that decontrol of pipelayer exports would be helpful to the ailing Caterpillar Tractor Co., which makes the big machines. This, however, is just another way of saving that East-West trade, while appropriately subect to certain controls on national security grounds, can be economically beneficial to the United States as well as to the Soviet Union.

- The Los Angeles Times.

After the Slaving of Aquino Who, including President Reagan, can really believe that the Marcos government will conduct a thoroughgoing investigation of the foul murder of Mr. Marcos's strongest political rival, Benigno S. Aquino Jr.?

Mr. Reagan is probably right to withhold judgment on whether to make his planned trip to the Philippines; he could hardly leap to the conclusion that the Marcos government was responsible for the Aquino murder. However, if nothing but whitewash is forthcoming from Manila, Mr. Reagan will enhance respect for himself and for the United States by having no further truck with a dictator who calls himself an anti-Communist to justify every form of human rights violation.

Military necessity may force the United States to pay Mr. Marcos a blackmailer's fee — $900 million over five years — for bases in the Philippines, but that does not mean that Vice President Bush has to proclaim ludicrously that "we love your adherence to democratic principle and to the democratic processes," as he did on a visit to Manila,

After the Aquino murder, Congress needs to take a hard look at a new U.S.-Philippine extradition treaty. But it would probably be too much to expect that holding up the treaty could force the Marcos government to produce an objective report on what happened at the Manila airport. For that, Mr. Reagan ought to rely on his own investigative resources. - Tom Wicker in The New York Times.

The years of martial law and tight control of the press, along with charges of political repression and election chicanery, have left the Marcos regime with many credibility prob-lems. In a sense, it may not matter whether Mr. Marcos or his associates are innocent or guilty of the slaying. So many people here think that Mr. Marcos, or someone near him, is guilty, that conclusive proof to the contrary may not change the perception at all.

It is difficult to find a taxi driver, a waitress or a store clerk in Manila who believes the official story that a lone gunman, possibly with links to communist insurgents, sneaked through tight security at the airport to within point-blank range of his victim.

Murder at a Filipino Crossroads

By Peter W. Stanley

ORTHFIELD, Minnesota — The rule of Ferdinand Marcos, which began vigorously and intelligently amid promises of social reform, economic growth, civic order and political competence, has become little more than a holding operation.

With the worst-performing economy in Southeast Asia and a colossal foreign debt, the Philippines is losing its battle to provide jobs for its mushrooming population. More than half of all Filipino families now report incomes below the poverty line, and about half of all children's deaths are attributable to malnutrition. Reform programs such as those that briefly brought peace and order to the streets, and gave promise of a distribution of land, have faded into memory.

As a result, the continuing enrichment of palace cronies, the suppression of democratic institutions and the arrest, torture and disappearance of critics of the regime can no longer be rationalized as the price that must be paid for progress and prosperity.

Even the Roman Catholic Church, traditionally a bulwark of social stability in the Philippines, has moved from its posture of "critical collaboration" to open denunciations of the government's abuse of hu-man rights and neglect of the poor.

Manila's preoccupation with Mr. Marcos's health and the rumors of his death that swept the city after the assassination of Benigno Aquino reflect the pervasive sense of a government in decline and an era waning.

Meanwhile, deeply rooted change is occurring in Philippine society. Growing population pressure and the approaching exhaustion of usable land threaten still worse poverty and social violence. The rural social ethic that linked landlords and their tenants in alliances based on mutual obligation has weakened as a result of urbanization and absentee ownership, and is giving way to class divisions. Tensions that have long existed between the central government and outlying regions in the archipelago remain unresolved.

To pick up the pieces after Mr. Marcos and to deal with issues of this magnitude, Filipinos can at the moment turn only to the two extremes: the Marxist revolutionaries of the New People's Army, who maintain guerrilla cadres in two-thirds of the provinces and are estimated to have infiltrated or taken over 20 percent of Philippine townships, and the candidates of Thirteen years of authoritarian rule have all but eliminated moderate democratic alternatives. Politicians who must operate in the open are vulnerable to repression. The fatuousness and excesses of democratic politics in the years before martial law have left bitter poules in the years before martial law have left bitter memories. And an entire generation — almost half the population — knows only Mr. Marcos and his regime. In the absence of a free press and free elections, no one really knows how many Filipinos seek a middle course between Imelda Marcos and the revolutionaries. Yet even Mr. Marcos feels compelled to legitimize his rule through contrived referendums and elections, and it is hard to see how the grays issue facing the

and it is hard to see how the grave issues facing the country could be resolved without a broadly based presentative government. Benigno Aquino offered the Philippines one credible hope for a moderate, centrist succession to Mr. Marcos. Whether even he retarned the personal authority and political charisma to unite the squabbling factions among Mr. Marcos's moderate opponents is not certain. Filipino politics is a fabric of personal alliances that cannot be maintained without attention and patronage on the spot, and Mr. Aquino, by staying in America for three years, may have been away too long. His death might persuade Filipinos that moderation is futile and reconciliation hopeless. Unless it galvanizes the moderate opposition loosely allied in the United Nationalist Democratic Organization, the transition from Mr. Marcos may be long and tortuous.

The United States, with a substantial economic and strategic stake in the Philippines and a history of close association, shares with Filipines an interest in fostering the orderly succession of a stable, moderate, democratic government. It is time to stand off from Mr. Marcos and help in every legitimate way to rebuild the shattered center among his opponents.

AMERICAN WAYS

When the Media Play Along By Robert J. McCloskey

WASHINGTON — In the end, it was the news media that got the superpowers off the hook. Like stubborn bull moose, neither Washington nor Moscow would let go in their places, Roger Mudd of NBC and John Wallach of Hearst Newspapers were invited. Les Gelb represented The New York Times.

All were disgruntled when only Addres's father and, the embassy's charach d'affaires anneared. One of agreed: Usher in the fourth estate as third party and good office. Even that wasn't smoothly arranged. The Soviets insisted on choosing who would attend a press conference at the embassy. At the State Department, other reporters drew straws to cover a second stage in a restricted area at Dulles International Airport. Altogether, six American news organizations participated

Those were the makeshift settings created to finesse the week-long diplomatic paralysis induced by the mis-chievous conduct of 16-year-old Andrei Berezhkov, son of a well-known Soviet diplomat. The boy was provided the opportunity to declare that he wanted to go home and to deny that he had written to President Reagan and The New York Times saying precisely the opposite: "I hate my conntry ... I want to stay here."

The White House, which has doubtless compared its letter with other samples of the boy's handwriting, is convinced of its authenticity. The governments were dug in on principles. To the Russians, the boy's actions, which included disappearing for 10 hours with his parents' car, were a family affair. To the Americans, they amounted to a request for political asylum and could not be dismissed. The State Department wanted to interview the boy alone. As it turned out, American reporters substituted for the government.

Once there was agreement that the press would have access to the boy and not only to his parents or other Soviet officials, the scenario moved rapidly. Two assistant secretaries of state would be on hand at Dulles. Initially the Soviets sought Wash-

and Cable News correspondent Daniel Schorr to pool for newspapers and networks. Neither was available. In phone interview about his discovery of higher-level and much more significant U.S. involvement with Barbie charge d'affaires appeared. One of the reporters, after listening to state-ments and addressing a few questions to the father, charged that they were invited "under false pretense." Finally the boy was brought in Responding to questions, he asserted that he did not write the letters and that he wanted to leave the United States. It was all over in 15 minutes.

The State Department pool, drawn from among 20 reporters, included The Associated Press, United Press International and The Washington Post. UPI became a substitute after CBS withdrew on being informed that cameras would not be permitted in the customs area at Dulles where the reporters would converge. (The Soviets permitted NBC to videotape the embassy press conference.)

who, like everyone else connected with coverage of this story, is con-vinced the published letter was not forged - said the boy "didn't seem under duress. He could have bolted and run" at Dulles. A State Department official said, "He could have given us a sign. But he didn't." Perhaps unavoidably, this contre-temps was elevated beyond its diplo-matic merit. Had Congress, even White House officials, been in town, we might not have seen a conclusion yet. As it was, people who ought to know better declaimed that the standoff was a mighty test of wills certain to have a profound effect on Soviet-American relations.

It was a media event, and there isn't a reporter involved in the finale that assured safe passage for the boy and his parents who doesn't realize he was lied to by father, son and Soviet ington Post reporter Don Oberdorfer official. If the press wants to say "you had this one on us," the governments should know what that means, the CIA for publication.

It is surprising that Allan A. Ryan States is almost certainly false. The case of Ferenc Wajda, the fascist interior minister in wartime Hun-Jr., author of the Justice Department report, was apparently unaware of this. Mr. Ryan wrote repeatedly that he had reviewed all existing records gary, came to public attention years ago. John Loftus, a Boston lawyer who at one time prosecuted Nazi war and consulted all the people alive who knew about the use of Barbie by criminals for the Department of Justice, says the United States used dozens of "rat lines," or escape routes, to help wanted Nazis disappear. Mr. Loftus was cryptic in a tele-

American intelligence.

He may simply have been pre-sumptuous, rather than deliberately concealing embarrassing facts, be-cause Mr. Loftus believes that "the U.S. is not capable of giving a com-plete and truthful account" about the agents it used in the early postwar period. "The records have been hopelessly mislaid," he says. He has now given the government some tips on vhere to find them.

The Ryan report is not a convinc-ing demonstration that knowledge of what it flatly calls "obstruction of justice" in the Barbie case was limited to a dozen or so officers of the army's Counter Intelligence Corps. The report itself refers to the "absence of an inquiry or directive from higher lev-els" after the case became a public controversy, which suggests serious negligence if not collusion.

Further, the report is addressed exclusively to the Barbie story. How widespread was the U.S. practice of shielding Nazis liable for trial? Again, Mr. Ryan hints that he suspects a lot more than he says.

"No other nation in occupied Germany — France, Great Britain or the Soviet Union — is in any position to criticize the decision to use Barbie now that the U.S. government has revealed the facts behind that use," his report says. "Each of those gov-decision at the same time: to invoke the available resources of the former German Nazi regime and advance what each government perceived to be its national interest." why imply that the United States has no more to answer for than the Barbie case? Another, much broader and deeper review is in order. It is shocking to find that America was both prosecuting and secretly employing Nazi murderers in the im-mediate aftermath of the war. It is even more shocking to realize that the cover-up is still going on, despite the apparent candor about Barbie. And that is why the report is dis-turbing as well as inadequate. Mr. Ryan denounces the Americans who protected Barbie, but he calls their behavior "neither cynical end of the attitude that anything is permissible, including the obstruc-tion of justice, if it falls under the cloak of intelligence." He says the reforms of the last decade should lead intelligence officers to realize that purely operational problems "cannot be the exclusive concerns." But do they? There are strong pressures now to undo those reforms, which never went very far, and to give free rein again to secret agencies without the democratic process of accountabil-ity, which Mr. Ryan found woefully lacking in the Barbie case.

The argument is that the Russians always have, still do, and always will use every kind of dirty trick, so the United States must free its agents to match them. The answer, as the Ryan report shows in a most narrow way, is that the United States stands to lose much more than it gains by subverting itself, violating its own laws, and betraying its own principles. The Taiwan Model

Regarding "Reliance on the West: An Old Chinese Puzzle" (IHT, Aug. 10) by Philip Kuhn: At the end of his article, Professor

Kuhn implies that the United States should not "lose" mainland China because of issues regarding Taiwan. been more successful than in the Republic of China on Taiwan. American seeds planted in the 1950s have grown dramatically on Taiwan, but still within the bounds of a society that remains quite distinctly Chinese. I think two lessons can be drawn from the Taiwan model. First, the United States can be sure that it can and nation, for U.S. China policy has been achieved in one part of China -Taiwan. Second, and contrary to what Professor Kuhn seems to think it would be wrong for the United States to abandon Taiwan now.

Wouldn't it be much simpler to let the Chinese on Taiwan carry out America's China policy for it? This is possible because the Chinese model on Taiwan has and will continue to influence the mainland's drift toward the West. In other words, let the Chinese on Taiwan influence their brethren on the mainland. The United States can take a backseat.

Those Who Pay for U.S. Health Care Should Unite to Push for Lower Costs

VEW YORK — Progress in combating U.S. inflation has been welcome news. The health sector, however, continues to experience raring inflation. In 1979 the United States spent $215 billion on the alth sector, or 8.9 percent of the gross national product. In 1982 the gure was $322 billion, or 10.5 percent of GNP. In just three years, health ending increased 50 percent - considerably faster than general inflaion or growth in family incomes.

Most experts agree that normal market forces that help restrain inflation in other sectors do not work well in the health sector. Ninety ercent of hospital expenditures are paid by public programs or private ery-intensive medicine.

High health-care costs, not surprisingly, are of greatest concern to 200se who pay the bills. Taxpayers have seen outlays for Medicare and 4 dedicaid, the federal programs that subsidize health are for the elderly and the needy, jump from $51 billion in 1979 to $83 billion in 1982. The average annual family premium for employer-based health insunce is $1,620. Premiums for some companies have risen as much as 40 ercent in a single year. Health benefits are an important issue in collective bargaining.

. For the 25 million Americans without any health-insurance coverage aflation in health-care costs is a serious problem. One in 10 famili epresenting 18 million people, spends more than 10 percent of its income in health care. More than three million families, or 7.6 million people, ave truly catastrophic out-of-pocket health expenses, exceeding 20 ercent of family income.

One approach proposed to combat increases in health-care costs is to ntroduce more competitive pressure. Legislative proposals include tax-ag employer contributions to health-insurance plans above a certain comit and requiring employers to offer employees a choice among several class. It is argued that these proposals would give employees incentives "police" the health-care market and exert pressure to reduce costs.

But there is no evidence that hospitals and physicians would respond to ax changes by lowering charges, or that tax changes would induce use of ower-cost alternatives. Multiple-choice plans would reduce the econonies of scale of group insurance, would lower employers' incentives to elf-insure, could lead to adverse risk selection and unstable premiums mong plans, and would do away with informed purchasing by employ-

Most of the proposals intended to increase competition and contain ealth-care costs are largely untried. Even advocates concede that the proposals are unlikely to have a major impact on health-care costs for ... nore than a decade.

... Another approach is reforming methods of payment under public programs and private health-insurance plans to create incentives for fficiency. This approach differs from the competition approach in that it mphasizes changing incentives faced by physicians, hospitals and other realth-care providers, while the competition approach emphasizes changng incentives faced by consumers.

Mandatory Cost Commissions

Six states have had considerable success in limiting health-care costs ... hrough mandatory state cost commissions. These states' average annual ncreases in hospital costs are about three percentage points below those of states without such commissions.

Medicare's new prospective payment plan based on patient diagnosis hould give hospitals an incentive to reduce unnecessarily long stays and liminate unnecessary tests and operations. However, since it will apply only a fraction of all patients, bospitals will have an incentive to shift osts not paid by Medicare to privately insured patients.

In the meantime, private insurers, employers and unions are struggling with options for stemming health-care costs for privately insured paloyers r realth business may be able to negotiate favorable prospective rates from nospitals and physicians.

Some employers are proposing larger deductibles or co-insurance although this may shift costs to employees rather than reduce hospital md physician charges. Other companies are experimenting with employer health fitness and promotion programs. Some companies could benefit rom systematic health-cost-containment audits — pimpointing areas where their experience seems out of line with national or regional norms. But the basic problem remains: As long as the payers are fragmented, he providers of health care are likely to have the upper hand.

By Winston Williams

New York Times Service CHICAGO - Three years ago, officers of Continental Illinois Bank, this city's largest, were laughing all the way to their vaults over the management comedy at their archrival, the First National Bank of Chicago.

First Chicago was losing a host of venera-ble clients to Continental, including Inland Steel, the Pritzker family and Field Enterprises. There had been embarrassing disclosures of loans to the Hunt family to finance its ill-fated silver capers. Profits had been sliding for five straight quarters and First Chicago's top executives seemingly spent as michine fighting among themselves as they

And last spring, First Chicago and Sears, Roebuck jointly established an innovative export-service company, the first between two major U.S. companies under the Bank Export Services Act of 1982.

Barry F. Sullivan, 53 years old, the reclusive, tough and charismatic chairman of First Chicago for the past three years, has received much of the credit for the turnaround. Mr. Sullivan, a 23-year veteran of Chase Manhattan Bank before moving west, was brought in after the bank's affairs became so messy that the directors dismissed the chairman, A. Bonds Plummet After M-1 Data

NEW YORK — The Federal Reserve reported Friday that the basic measure of the nation's money supply, known as M-1, fell $200 million in the latest week, a smaller

Analysts had hoped for a decline of $1 billion or more, which would have brought the closely-watched money measure closer in line with the Fed's growth targets.

decline than Wall Street had antici-

As a result, bond prices plunged immediately after the Fed report was released late Friday afternoon, with long-term government prices falling a full point.

Earlier in the week, there was speculation in the financial markets that the Federal Reserve might ease its credit stance in the face of slowing money growth. But when the Fed report showed the decline in M-1 was not enough to put mon-ey growth back into the Fed's 5 to 9 percent target range, investors "so-bered up rather bluntly," as one analyst put it.

The Fed also revised the previous week's M-1 figures to show a smaller decline of $300 million.

The Fed initially had reported a $500-million decline.

The M-1 numbers dashed hopes the Fed would ease up on its credit policy, at least until money-supply growth falls back within the Fed's ennounced target range.

With the anticipation that the Fed would not loosen its reins, the dollar rose slightly in New York Friday to 2.6723 Deutsche marks from 2.6560 DM Thursday, and against the pound, to $1.5023 from

Fed Unit Clears Slight Tightening

 The notes showed that the committee expected M-2 money supply to grow at an annual rate of about 8.5 percent from June to September, M-3 at 8 percent and M-1 at 7 percent. nome statistics has raised fresh doubts that Britain, which slipped into recession in 1979, is finally back on the road to prosperity.

The Conservative government, re-elected in June, has pinned hopes on exports' leading the recovery. But these took a knock last month, slumping 7.5 percent from June to £4.73 billion ($7.1 billion), which left a trade deficit of £350 million.

Predictably, sterling dropped slightly on for-eign exchange markets when the July figures were released this week, and the London stock market, which hit a record last week, lost some ground.

While officials said the export decline was just a hiccup, the latest nonpolitical economic study contradicted the official optimism that the recovery would gain momentum next year. The National Institute of Economic and Social Research, a private group, predicted this week that the consumer boom would peter out, economic growth would slow, inflation would almost double to 8 percent by the end of the year and unemployment would remain over three million for the next 18 months.

Shows Indications Of Fizzling Out Reners

LONDON — Britain's flickering economic recovery shows signs of fizzling out as a gloomy picture emerges of one in seven people living below the poverty line.

Economists question whether Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's much-heralded recovery, nurtured by a spring consumer boom, can be satained in the face of a sudden drop in exports and declining industrial production, with inflaand declining industrial production, with infla-tion on the rise again. Unemployment mean-while remains very high.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Japan Output Was Flat Last Month; Inflation Declines to a 24-Year Low

TOKYO (Combined Dispatches) - Japan's preliminary industrial production index remained steady in July, at a seasonally adjusted 103.6. In figure, on a base of 100 in 1980, was unchanged from June, the Ministry of International Trade and Industry said Friday.

Also on Friday, the prime minister's office said the consumer price index had used 1.3 percent over an annual period to mid-August, the analiest increase in 24 years. The figure compared with a 2.5-percent car-to-year rise in July.

Also on Friday, the Finance Ministry reported that recurrent profits of pillion and Japanese corporations fell 6.1 percent to 16.132 trillion yen ($66.4 pillion) in fiscal 1982, which ended on March 31. The decline followed a irop of 12.8 percent in fiscal 1981.

More Rises Seen in Heavy-Oil Prices ROTTERDAM (Reuters) — Saudi Arabia and Kuwait are likely to raise official prices for their heavy crude oils now that Egypt has added a follar a barrel to the price of its heaviest grade, European oil trade

Egypt's General Petroleum Corp. has announced that it would raise the price of its heaviest crude, Ras Gharib, to $24.50 a barrel with 60 days credit, effective Sept. 1. The lighter Belayin blend and Suez blend are to rise 50 cents and 25 cents respectively, to $26.75 and $28.50.

Ras Gharib traded on the spot market at $24.90 a barrel last week, well-

LOS ANGELES - Mitsubishi Bank Ltd.'s $282-million bid for the Bancal Tristate Corp. clearly

Total Japanese held banking assets in the state at the end of last year amounted to $7.5 billion, matching those of California's sixth-largest bank, the Union Bank. The acquisition of Bancal, the parent of the Bank of California, will add $3.9 billion.

California has distinct attractions for the Japanese banking industry. In addition to being a rich lode of consumer deposits, it is an important location for trade with the Far East.

But banking analysts both in California and in Tokyo say that the bid by Mitsubishi, Japan's fourth-largest bank, also reflects the general strategy of Japanese banks to strengthen their foothold in the U.S. Evential contents. in the U.S. financial-services mar-offer of $298.9 million from Wells Fargo & Co., with criticism.

They note that six of California's top 10 banks would be controlled by foreign investors if Mitsubishi prevailed, a fact that they attribute to federal banking regulations that almost prohibit acquisitions of Cal-ifornia banks by others in the state or elsewhere in the country.

"It's on the verge now of becom-ing a significant public-policy is-sue," said one banking executive, who asked not to be identified. "In this country, our regulations actu-ally favor foreign banks, while, in Japan especially, it's the local banks who are accurated." banks who are protected."

Banking specialists say the sub-sidiaries of Japanese banks have been able to attract business by offering lower interest rates for borrowers and higher rates for depositors. They are aided in undercutting their U.S. competitors, in part, by the lower cost of capital available to their parent banks in Јарап.

More recently, however, the banks have also aggressively courted medium-size U.S. companies, with sales of less than $100 million, with mixed success.

The Mitsubishi offer comes five months after the Fuji Bank, Japan's second largest, acquired two commercial-finance units of Walter E. Heller Corp. in Chicago, and in some U.S. banking circles, the bid is being interpreted as the start of a new wave of takeovers by Japanese

In announcing the transaction Tuesday, the parent company said it had "adopted a new international strategy." It said the Bancal purchase would help "aggressively develop its business with United States companies," especially those with sales of less than $100 million.

It added that Mitsubishi wanted to strengthen lending along the Pacific Rim - the eastern shores of Asia and the West Coast of the United States. That area, including Japan, Taiwan, Korea, Hong Kong and Malaysia, has surpassed Eu-rope as the leading trading region for the United States.

New Tactics Help Bring First Chicago Recovery

bid for a troubled local savings and loan association has left many bankers confused, especially since First Chicago's return on assets, at 50 cents for each $100 in assets, ranked well below its competitors.

Nonperforming assets have also been growing, reaching $888 million at midyear, up from $740 mil-lion a year earlier. The acquisinon last year of Bankers Trust's $700million credit-card portfolio has raised some doubts. So has a recent $250-million loan to Brazil.

A few of First Chicago's large corporate customers say that the bank's attempts to shore up its retail and domestic corporate business have not been matched by efforts in its international depart-ment, where services lag behind those offered by its New York comcept the offer. Howard Bonham, an analyst for Rauscher Pierce Refsnes in Dallas, said Burlington may have decided that "they better make their move now or the price of the El Paso shares would keep going up." El Paso stock, which traded at below 18 a share in July, has been rising steadily over the past month. El Paso stock was the most active on the New York Stock Exchange Thursday, and on Friday closed at 23%, up % Burlington closed at The U.S. economic recovery is increasing demand for plastics, building materials and other prod-ucts that El Paso produces through its chemical subsidiary, and other companies might find El Paso's ex-ploration and production operations attractive. For the second quarter, El Paso said its net income increased to $22.8 million, or 43 cents a share, from $18.2 million, or 37 cents a share, a year earlier. Revenues declined to $984.3 million from $1.10 billion.

Effects of Tower's Decision Debated

Analysts Call Move's Impact on Defense Issues Exaggerated

By Martha M. Hamilton

Washington Post Service WASHINGTON — Defense and acrospace stocks have been declining this week, and some analysts attributed the movement to the announcement by Senator John G. Tower, Republican of Texas, that he would not seek re-election. But other analysts said the impact of Mr. Tower's resignation was exaggerated. They noted that he would probably be succeeded as chairman of the Armed Services Committee by Barry Goldwater, Republican of Arizona, or, if Democrats regain control of the Senate, by Henry Jackson of Washington. Both support a strong military bud-

Gulf & Western Hopes to Sharpen Image

Analysts Praise Move to Stress Consumer Sector

By Pamela G. Hollie

New York Times Service NEW YORK - From his 42dfloor office on 61st Street here, Martin S. Davis, head of Gulf & Western Industries, has a clear view of upper Manhattan. From that vantage point, Central Park seems to neatly divide the crowded island into three distinct pieces.

This sense of order appeals to Mr. Davis, who was named vice chairman and chief executive in February after the unexpected death of Gulf & Western's founder, Charles G. Bluhdorn.

Since he took control of the sprawling conglomerate, Mr. Davis has been pruning and restructuring the company, muscling it, in fact, into three distinct operating units. The vast securities portfolio that Mr. Blubdorn assembled has been sold, businesses have been shed. debt reduced and assets consolidated. All of which is leading to a new image of G&W as a consumer-products company.

Under Mr. Blubdorn, who amassed more than 100 companies tenders for Mr. Bluhdom's job and in 25 years, Gulf & Western, with pushed Gulf & Western rapidly $5.5 billion in annual revenue, was Earlier this month, Mr. Davis announced that Gulf & Western would divest itself of 20 percent of its assets, or about $1 billion in sales. The company, which once had 21 operating units, will be con-solidated into three areas — entertainment, financial services and that, as structured, the Bluhdorn onsumer products.

The plan would result in writefrom 18.75 cents a share on Oct. 1. And Mr. Davis, who has a reputation for delivering, has promised sion, both internally and h acquisitions that are comwith other G&W opera-

The divestiture, Mr. Davis stressed, was begun by Mr. Blub-dorn, who in 1979 began a program to lessen dependence on capital intensive operations. But it has been Mr. Davis who beat out other contenders for Mr. Bluhdom's job and able to boast that its businesses ranged from A to Z, automotive to zinc.

"We're in a different mode," Mr.

"These things might have happened anyway," said the 56-year-old executive, who began his career as a director of marketing and sales at Paramount Studios. But Mr. Daat Paramount Studios. But Mr. Davis acknowledged that his management style called for fast action.

Analysis who have followed the sometimes growth-for-growth's-sake style of Mr. Bluhdorn's empire building view the changes at Gulf & Western favorably. Many felt that are structured the Bluhdorn empire was unmanageable.

"Mr. Bluhdorn was the only man

Nearly half the company, with a solid base for write-offs will come from the company's ailing natural-resources di-vision in Nashville, Tennessee, and will include the company's 60 per-cent interest in Jersey Miniere Zinc in Clarksville, Tennessee.

The company is also selling its building products and race tracks.

G&W will sell the Arlington Park race track in Illinois, for about $18 million. Also to be sold are the

According to Neil Call, executive vice president with responsibility for the company's long-term strategic development, negotiations are under way for the sale of several companies, some of which may be sold to the various managements. In March, Consolidated Cigar subsidiary was sold for $120 million in cash and notes to its management.

But Gulf & Western is expected to hold on to those companies it sees as vital to its new image as a consumer and communications company. Analysts consider Para-mount Pictures Corp. and Simon & Schuster Inc., Gull & Western's publishing subsidiary, as the company's two strongest units.

Both fall under Barry Diller, president of the new entertainment and communications group, considered the most powerful of the three Gulf & Western presidents. The other presidents are Reece A. Overcash Jr., president of the Gulf & Western services group, and James I. Spiegel, president of the company's consumer- and industrial-products group.

Though Mr. Bluhdorn was aware that his company had grown too large to be managed easily, analysts credit him with building a team capable of making the running of the company look easier than it

Although many outsiders be-lieved that Mr. Bluhdom ran the company singlehandedly, "a company this size can never be run by one man," said Lawrence E. Levinson, executive vice president. But, he added, the changes that have occurred during the last few Western would move forward without Mr. Blubdorn.

"It was a rapid change that was forced on us," said Mr. Levinson,

Mr. Bluhdom's jobs. Mr. Levinson spoke of the tran-sition at Gulf & Western as if it had happened almost effortlessly. But, shortly after Mr. Davis was named vice chairman, David N. Judelson, president and chief operating officer, resigned, and Richard E. Sny-der, head of Simon & Schuster, was said to have been unhappy after he was told that the restructuring would result in his reporting to Mr.

With the major shake-ups over, Mr. Davis said the company was proceeding with its plans. The divestiture may take two years to complete, but the company will not wait to begin the fourth step of its corporate plan.

"Step 4 is to run what we've now identified as a new company," Mr. Davis said. That new company, he said, will be a broad-based con-

Viking Press, 40 West 23d Street, New York,

THE protagonist of R.K. Narayan's new novel is

Raja, a spiendid tiger who creates and loses a family, frightens the villagers in the south Indian territory he roams, becomes a star of the circus and a potential movie star and receives wisdom. Along the way, he also comes to understand a couple of the languages employed by humans as well as some antic aspects of the way they behave toward

The tale is told largely in the first tiger, with the straightforward simplicity of a parable for children. Although the Master who takes Raja under his spiritual wing believes that the tiger may have been a poet in a former existence and that the souls of all creatures are one soul, Narayan, as always, is interested mainly in the human animal, which is a lot more peculiar and a lot less predictable than any

The shrewdly observed peculiarities of ordinary folk lend most of the fun to "A Tiger for Malgudi."

There is the Captain, owner of the Grand Malgudi

Circus and trainer of Raja, who prides (and deludes)

United Press International

NEW YORK — A 122-year-old thank-you note from President Abraham Lincoln to the president of Columbia University has been uncovered in a closet in Scotland and returned to the university, the school says. Lincoln's letter, dated June 26, 1861, was found by Janet Haldane of Perthshire, Scotland. She donated it to the university. In the note to Columbia President Charles King, Lincoln expressed his thanks for an honorary degree from Columbia College. King presented the degree to Lincoln in a brief ceremony at the White House, where the president reportedly was so involved with problems of the Civil War, he did not have time to put on his jacket to accept the honor.

Film About Afghan War

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A one-hour film about the war in Afghanistan, produced by the U.S. Information Agency, is being distributed to 62 countries for broadcasts expected to begin Sunday.

Enutled "Afghanistan: The Hidden War," the film includes five sections made by photographers who have entered Afghanistan with the help of Afghans fighting against Soviet forces. It shows their side of the lighting as well as devastated villages and a Soviet prisoner,

Maisushita Subsidiary Plans Borns Stock Issue

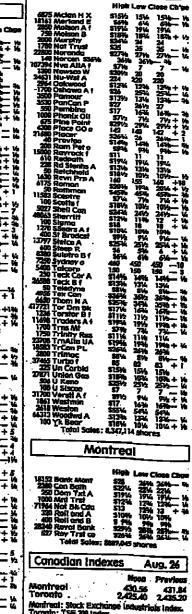

TOKYO - Matsushita Electric Trading Co. plans a one-for-10 bo-nus stock issue Oct. 15 for shareholders of record as of Sept. 31, a company spokesman said.

The bonus issue will increase the company's capital to 5.95 billion yen (about $24.5 million) from 5.41 billion, the spokesman said. The company, an exporting subsidiary of Matsushita Electric Industrial Co. had 5.6 percent foreign owner-ship as of March 31, he said.

Soviet Woman Breaks High Jump Record

Tamara Bykova of the Soviet Union set a world record Thursday in the women's high jump with a leap of 6 feet, 84 inches (2.038 meters) at a track meet in Pisa, Italy. Bykova broke the 6-8 record set Saturday by Ulrike Meyfarth of West Germany at the European track and field meet in London. Bykova also cleared 6-8 in London, but Meyfarth won because she cleared the height on her first try.

Cuban Wins Discus Amid Weak Field; U.S. Starts Strong in Women's Track

By Robert Facher Washington Post Service

CARACAS - For the first time in the history of the Pan American Games, the United States failed to win the men's discus throw. The United States, of course, had no entries because both Paul Bishop and Greg McSeveney flew home Tuesday in the wake of the drugtesting scare.

So Luis Delis won on Thursday virtually unopposed, at 220 feet 10 inches (67.3 meters), and brought Cuba its sixth gold medal in nine men's track-and-field events contested thus far. The United States

The U.S. women have been more successful. Coleen Sommer won Thursday's high jump at 6-34, and Joan Benoit took the 3,000 meters in 9:14.19 to give the United States three golds in five women's events.

The U.S. women, outdoing their male counterparts, also won a gold medal in basketball, one in tennis and one in table tennis as the United States raised its medal count to 104 golds and 214 overall. Cuba was second at 64 golds and a total men's track-and-field competition of 135.

But the U.S. men got a surprise the 200 meters. The 400-meter pole vaulter Mike Tally came back cause of lack of entries, announce-to compete. Price Shoots 66 to Take World Series Golf Lead

AKRON, Ohio - Nick Price of South Africa blitzed the back nine in 30 to complete a 4-under-par 66 Thursday that established a oneshot lead over Jack Nicklaus in the first round of the $500,000 World Series of Golf.

"I hit a few good shots and got it on a roll," Price said. "I haven't done that for a while." Price joined the U.S. tour after his last-round collapse handed Tom Watson the 1982 British Open title. He gained entry to this elite event as the leader of the South African Order of Merit, a feat he accomplished without winning a title. He ranks a distant 117th on the American money-winning list this year with $28,828.

Price, 26, was 2-over-par after four holes on the 7,173-yard south course at the Firestone Country Club, but turned this around with a 25-foot chip-in for a birdie on the 11th hole.

"I expected to make bogey on the hole, and instead made birdie," he said. "It just changed everything Nicklaus, a five-time winner of this title and a narrowly beaten challenger in his last two starts, was a single stroke off the pace and tied at 67 with Bobby Clampett.

"I have no quarrels with a 67," Nicklaus said, "I'll take four of those and waltz back home to Palm Beach, I really played very well. I didn't get any more out of the round that I should have."

Clampett, who has missed the this season, said his effort was "the first solid round of golf I've played in several months."

Hale Irwin, Mike Nicolette, Fred Couples and Tommy Nakajima were at 68. The only others in the international field of 42 who broke par were Ray Floyd, Larry Mize and Bob Gilder, tied at 69. Craig

U.S. Open, Tass reported Friday. It will be the first time since 1976 that Soviet players have entered the event, which begins Tuesday. Two of the players, Larisa Savchenko, 17, and Svetlana Cherneva, 20, reached the quarterfinals as a doubles team at Winbledon. Both will participate in the qualifying for the U.S. Open, and Savchenko also will play in the junior girls division, as will Natalya Reva, 19.

Andrei Chesnokov and Andrei Olkhovsky, each 19, will participate in the jumior boys competition. Both were described by Tass as lacking in international experience, but were "thought to be among the most talented" of the young Soviet players.

Winged Keels Are Accepted By N.Y. Club

NEWPORT, Rhode Island -The New York Yacht Club withdrew its objections Friday to winged keels on Australia II and the British yacht Victory '83 in the America's Cup race.

After four months of insisting that Australia II's keel was illegal Robert G. Stone Jr., commodore of the host NYYC, said, "Questions relating to the keels of Australia II and Victory '83 have been resolved." Jim Alabaster, a spokesman for Victory '83, said calmly, "We were never worried. We were quite confident it was legal. The Americans were causing all the fuss. We haven't been sitting here biting our Australia II and Victory '83 begin a best-of-seven series Sunday to select the challenger for the silver trophy that the New York club has eld for more than 132 years. Australia II, with an overwhelming number of victories in the preliminary and semifinal trials, is regarded as the likely yacht to challenge the American defender beginning Sept. 13. Stone explained that the NYYC's decision was based on verification of a decision a year ago in regard to the British yacht.

which was then contemplating placing fins on its keel. In answer to a query from the Victory '83 syndicate, the International Yacht Racing Union's Keel Boat Technical Committee ruled in August 1982 that wings are permit-ted as long as the static draft is not exceeded "That ruling under the IYRU regulations is controlling for the 1983 match and the New York Yacht Chub accepts it as such,"

Stone said. The surprise decision came only a day after a Dutch engineer said that representatives of the club tried unsuccessfully to persuade him to sign an affidavit swearing that Australia II was not designed by Ben Lexcen, an Australian naval

Australia II's executive director, Warren Jones, assailed the NYYC for conducting "a reprehensible campaign of harassment" because it feared "honest competition" with the Aussie yacht. "The question arose from reports and newspaper articles in the Dutch press intimating that the keel design was the product, if not the invention, of Dutch experts,"

Stone explained. "The New York Yacht Club was obligated to investigate the matter," Stone said. Having completed the evidence available to us is insufficient to press the matter further at this time."

Normand Leveille — A career cut short.

Stricken Hockey Pro Wins Workmen's Compensation borne by Canadaian health insur-

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches BOSTON -- Normand Leveille, the Boston Bruins winger who suf-fered a near-fatal brain hemorrhage last October, has won his claim for workmen's compensation. He will receive his first check next week

Commissioner Richard M. Lane of the Massachusetts Industrial Accident Board issued the temporary order on Thursday.

Leveille, confined to a wheelchair, will receive the state maximum of $297.85 a week for up to 250 weeks, providing he remains disabled. Payments would continue beyond that point if he were still totally disabled.

The ruling is retroactive to the date of the injury, Oct. 23, 1982, meaning that Leveille's first check will be more than $13,000.

"It's a good first step," said Paul Horovitz, the attorney who represented Leveille. "It achieves the extensive physical therapy pro-primary goal for Normand and his gram. A native and resident of family to get the money and relieve that pressure for them."

that Leveille's disabling injury was congenital and questioned whether athletes who participate in such contact sports as hockey are eligible for workmen's compensa benefits if injured in action.

Leveille, 20, suffered the hemorrhage in Vancouver, British Columbia, between the first and second periods of a game against the Canncks. He was near death for a few days. His rehabilitation has progressed remarkably, however, and he recently came to Boston for a benefit golf tournament in his

ROME - Michael Gross of West Germany set a world record in the men's 200-meter butterfly Friday, clocking 1 minute 57.05 seconds to take the gold medal at the 16th European Swimming Championships. Sergei Fesenko of the Soviet Union took the silver, with the bronze going to Paolo Re-velli of Italy. The previous record, 1:58.01, was set in 1981 by Graig Bearesley, an American. East Germany, meanwhile, set a world record in the women's 400meter medley relay of 4 minutes 05.79 seconds. The team of Ins Kleber, Ute Geweniger, Ines Geissler and Birgit Meineke bet-tered the previous mark, of 4:05.88 set by East Germany in last year's World Championships in Ecuador.

Geweniger continued to do well individually, taking the gold medal in the women's 200-meter medley. Kathleen Nord, another East German, took the silver medal almost three seconds adrift, and the bronze went to Irina Gerasimova of the Soviet Union. On Thursday, Geweniger set a world record in the 100-meter breaststroke. Astrid Stranss, also of East Germany, won the gold medal in the women's 800-meter freestyle, finishing ahead of her compatrion Anke Sonnenbrodt, who took the silver. Sarah Hardcastle of Britain captured the bronze.

Dirk Richter of East Germany

won the gold medal in the men's 100-meter backstroke, finishing ahead of two swimmers from the Soviet Union. Vladimir Shemeto won the silver while Sergei Zabolotnoy earned the bronze.

Keeping Women Happy

WASHINGTON — No matter how hard President Reagan tries he just can't seem to satisfy the female constituency in the United States.

A few weeks ago he put his gender foot in his mouth again. He apologized to the International Federation of Business and Profes- the panel in favor of my own consional Women, who had been servative ideology." turned away from the White House after a long-awaited, scheduled tour, and then to show his heart was in the right place he told them, "I happen to be one who believes if it wasn't for women, us men would still be walking around in skin suits, carrying clubs."

This statement did not have the soothing effect the president hoped it would, and there was a lot of moaning in the audience.

The president went back to the White House angry and frustrated. "I've always loved the opposite he told the staff. "But why don't they love me?"

"Mr. President," one of his people said, "why don't we appoint a presidential commission to study the gender gap?"

"Why should I appoint a presidential commission?

"Because it worked for Social Security, it worked for the MX, and certainly it's going to work for Cen-tral America. The best thing you've got going for you now, is every time you get stumped on an issue, you can appoint a presidential commis-sion to study it."

Kandinsky House Sold 3 Years After Slaying

The Associated Press GSTAAD, Switzerland - Nina Kandinsky's chalet, where the widow of the French painter was slain three years ago, was sold at auction for 2.45 million Swiss francs (about $1,140,000). The chalet Esmeralda, built long after the 1944 death of the Russian-born artist Vasily Kandinsky, was bought by a Swiss businessman, Henri-Ferdinand Lavanchy, who outbid half a dozen others Wednesday.

Proceeds of the sale are likely to go to the French state because Mrs. Kandinsky was a French national and apparently left no beirs. She was found strangled to death in the house Sept. 2, 1980. The murder was never solved.

"Okay, what do we call the commission?" "The President's Blue Ribbon Panel on Closing the Female Window of Vulnerability."

"It has a nice ring to it. We'll appoint men from all walks of life. so they can't accuse me of stacking

"Since the commission has to do with women's problems, don't you think we should at least have one female on it?"

"That would be a mistake. If I appoint a woman to the panel I'll be accused of tokenism."

"Why not appoint two women?" "Then I'll be accused of favoring the female view. I've done more for women than any president of the United States in history. But every time I appoint one, the militant groups criticize me for not doing enough for their sex. I'm sick and tired of the constant drumbest that I'm insensitive to women's issues." "This commission will still that drumbeat, Mr. President."

"How can you be so sure?" Because by appointing a presidential panel you are showing the American woman that you are concerned about the problem and want to do something about it. Once the commission makes its recommendations, then you can act on them." "I'm not going to act on them if I don't like what the panel recom-

"You don't have to, sir. The beauty of a presidential commis-sion is that if you don't agree with the report you can stuff it in a file drawer and forget about it."

"That's what I'll do with it if they oush for an Equal Rights Amendment. Do we have any candidates for the commission?" What about the golf pro at the Burning Tree Golf Club?

"Isn't that the club in Washington that won't allow women in except once a year to buy Christmas presents for their husbands?"

"Yes, sir. I'm a member." "Why do we need a golf pro from an all-men's club on a presidential commission for women?" Because the guys in the locker rooms should be heard from, too. "Well, I want this gender gap put to rest once and for all. Start working on it right away. Now if you'll excuse me, I'm going to have lunch

The Restoration Of Cairo's Citadel

By Judich Miller New York Times Service

AIRO - Nothing so exemplifies the conquests that Cairo has enjoyed and endured through the centuries as the Cita-

The monumental fortress, nestled on a spur of the rose-tinted Mokkatam hills, has dominated Cairo's skyline as definitively as the armies that occupied it have ruled the city.

Since the beginning of its construction by the Arab conqueror Saladin in 1176, most of the 220acre fortress, as well as the mosques, palaces and govern-ment buildings it encompasses, have been closed to the public, largely because it has remained a military installation.

This month, however, the Citadel came into its own as one of the largest and most dramatic monuments in the Islamic world. At an elaborate ceremony, President Hosni Mubarak opened most of the Citadel to the public in honor of the completion of the first and major phase of an ambitious $10-million restoration of the fortress city behind limestone

The renovation, which has already cost $2 million and involved thousands of Egyptian students and workers, is the largest ever done on the city's deteriorating Islamic monuments. For far too long, students of Islamic art have complained, the Citadel and hundreds of medieval mosques, baths, schools and government buildings that constitute Islamic Cairo have been neglected. Many monuments have been destroyed, and Egypt's limited resources have been used instead to restore older pharaonic

Many here give credit for the new emphasis on Islamic restoration to Ahmed Kadry, director of the Antiquities Organization, and especially to Abdel Hamid Radwan. Egypt's minister of culture, who finally obtained the money to start the work. At a news conference Aug. 8, the day before the opening, he said that the Citadel restoration was the first stage of a concerted effort to save Cairo's Islamic landmarks.

Egyptian officials take particular pride in the Citadel restoration because it is among the few such projects exclusively in Egyptian hands, President Mubarak said at the opening ceremony that foreign teams had estimated the cost of the renovation at $100 million or more, which Egypt could ill afford.

Instead, Radwan recruited 4,000 to 5,000 Egyptian students, ngineers and workers for the project. For the last three months, thousands have worked day and night to complete the first stage of the project.

Students painted gold-leaf script, sometimes in faulty English, on marble plaques. Women and young men hauled baskets overflowing with gravel and sand from the Citadel's portals to mosques. Dozens of young people joined to lift ancient pillars, modern trees and giant cactuses to designated places in a new Islamic garden.
"I feel a little like my ancestors building the pyramids," one stu-dent, covered with dust and paint, said. For her work, the student from Cairo University said, she received $4.50 a day. Others were earning far less, she added.

"A lot of Egyptians are very enthusiastic about the restoration at long last of our Islamic heri-tage," said Kamal el-Mallakh, the archaeologist who is credited with discovering the wooden solar boat next to the pyramids.

"This is not as old as pharaonic art, but it is 800 years of our history," Mallakh said. These buildings, these mosques speak of love, of mythology, of massacres, of betrayal. Now they will speak to us again."

It was at the fortress on March I, 1811, at the Bab el Azab, or Gate of Suffering, for example, that Mohammed Ali invited the Mameinkes to a dinner party and massacred them, a noteworthy violation of Arab hospitality.

Despite this lapse in protocol, Mohammed Ali, an Albanian soldier of fortune who came to pow-er in the 19th century, is credited with creating an Egyptian state, laying the foundations of a prosperous economy and turning a neglected Turkish colony into a kingdom whose power was recog-nized throughout the Mediterranean. His heirs ruled Cairo until King Farouk was overthrown in

For nearly 800 years, the Citadel was the administrative center of Egypt's rulers. Over this period it has been occupied by the Mam-clukes — the Turkish militia that guarded the heirs of Saladin and eventually replaced them as rulers - by Ottoman Turks, by Napoleon's army and by the British. Near Mohammed All's mosque stands a clock tower of gandy but striking colors. The clock it contains was presented to Moham-med Ali by King Louis Philippe of France. The king received the obelisk that now stands in Place de la Concorde in Paris. The bells of the clock had not worked since King Farouk was overthrown, ac-cording to Mallakh, but they are ringing once more.

The alabaster facade of the Mohammed Ali Mosque has been polished, and its cupola and semi-cupolas re-covered with lead and silver. The mosque's 85 carpets, which cover more than 170,000 square feet, have been restored. And the tomb of Mohammed Ali inside the mosque has been cleaned and repainted. While the mosque has tradiadditions inside the Citadel: 2 guest palace museum where paintings, furniture, porcelains and glasses belonging to the family of Mohammed Ali and his descendants can be seen: a Royal Carriages museum, containing the carriages used by Mohammed Ali and his heirs, and the Islamic garden.

To help pay for the renovation, entry prices have changed. Formerly, Egyptians were not charged to enter the limited areas where nonmilitary personnel were permitted. Now they will pay about 25 cents. Foreign tourists will pay about $2. This pricing system may seem unfair, but it is the informal custom to charge hawagas, or foreigners, a little more for most things here, be it taxis, flowers or food.

And the amount of the Citadel open to public view is far greater than ever before.

The west quarter of the for-tress, which includes a jail in which President Anwar Sadat kept prisoners, is still off limits. But the army has withdrawn from the Bijou Palace on the Citadel's southern edge. Next year, it is scheduled to leave the Citadel entionally been regarded as a jar-ring pastiche of styles, the monu-first time in its history.

Bernstein Turns 65

The composer-conductor Leonard Bernstein returned to Lawrence Massachusetts, his hometown, to lead a local orchestra of teen-agers in a celebration of his 65th birthday and said he'd also like to lead the worde in a symphony against "nuclear lunacy." Bernstein, who wrote the music for "West Side Story" and "On the Waterfront," dedicated his birthday Thursday to nuclear disarmament and conducted the Greater Boston,

Youth Symphony Orchestra in a concert attended by more than 9,000 people. Earlier, in an outdoor amphitheater dedicated in his name, Bernstein etched the word "Peace" on a plaque in several languages, including the Hebrew ver-sion, "Shalom." Simultaneously a skywriting plane flying overhead in bright blue skies wrote birthday greetings. "We should try to fight poverty instead of creating weaponry," proclaimed Bernstein, a longtime political activist. "Let's get rid of the weaponry factories and instead build libraries and schools," Born of Russian immigrants, Bernstein became the first American-born conductor of the New York Philharmonic, retiring in 1970 to become the Philharmonic's laureate conductor.

CBS Records has entered into a long-term $28-million contract with the Rolling Stones for the worldwide distribution of the rock group's recordings - the richest deal in music history, the Los Angeles Times reported. The newspaper said the contract was signed Thursday in Paris. The pact calls for the British singing group, fronted by 40-year-old Mick Jagger, to be paid $6 million per album for four albums over the next few years, according to Times sources. The contract also calls for additional promotional expenditures by CBS, bringing the total value of the package to about $28 million, the Times said. Previously, the richest recording contract on record was that of Kessny Rogers, who signed a five-album deal with RCA Records for a reported $20 million.

If the size of Paris's Charles de Ganlle Airport had not frightened Alfonso Rios he still would be vacationing in the French capital, the globetrotting stowaway said Thursday. Rios, 10, said he had made six trips in the past year by stowing away on international flights and had no intention of stopping. "I like to travel. Thursday. The chatty fifth-grade said he had flown to Miami twice and once each to Los Angeles, San-to Domingo in the Dominican Republic, and Paris. 'The Avisma flight Rios boarded last weekend had Frankfurt as its final destination, but mechanical problems forced the plane to land in Paris, The boy figured he might as well get off there and see what Paris was like. "That airport was so big, I got lost. I went from side to side. But everything I saw were tunnels and huge escalators. And I didn't understand a word anybody said. Finally, I gave up and went up to the police and told them I was lost." A French policeman gave him a cursory tour of the city, then brought him back to the airport for the trip home to Colombia.

Sixty-five years after they climbed down from their biplanes and hung up their flying gear for the last time, surviving members of World War I's Lafayette Flying Corps are holding their last reunion.
